Administrative History:

The Canadian Canal Society was founded in 1982 in St. Catharines, Ontario. The Society is a "not-for-profit, educational, scientific and historical organization, dedicated to the preservation of the canal heritage of Canada."¹ To this end, the Society endeavours to promote the collection and publication of materials related to the preservation, documentation and interpretation of Canadian canals. Their newsletter, Canals Canada/Canaux du Canada is distributed to Society members, and regular field trips are organized for interested members.

The Society also liaises with similar organizations in the United States and throughout the world. These ties are facilitated by the exchange of newsletters, bulletins and other periodical publications that keep the Society and its members informed about canal related issues, events and activities, in both Canada and abroad.

Scope and Content:

Fonds contains material related to the founding and activities of the Canadian Canal Society. Approximately half of the materials are administrative records such as financial records, correspondence, information on group field trips, constitution, membership and directors' lists, and minutes of board meetings and general meetings. Other related materials included with the minutes were retained, including agendas, financial statements, notices of meetings, proxy voting forms, President's Reports and Reports of the Nominating Committee.
